Distributed by SciVision South Africa, the Californian-based Biolase WaterLase iPlus Dental Laser, as well as the Biolase EPIC Laser, presents a cutting-edge alternative to traditional dentistry.

According to SciVision, patients will experience little to no pain or discomfort during or after WaterLase procedures. Dentistry and surgery is faster with better recovery, no swelling, bruising, antibiotics or painkillers needed in most cases.

"When using Biolase WaterLase dental technology, there is no friction and heat caused by traditional drilling, hence many procedures can now be done painlessly with no anaesthetic, enabling patients to leave the dentist's room without any numbing or hindering side effects," explains Peter Doubell, SciVision CEO. "WaterLase technology is extremely versatile and is able to treat both hard and soft tissue. Because WaterLase dentistry requires less to no anaesthesia, (therefore no injections), multiple procedures can be done simultaneously on different quadrants of the mouth – eliminating multiple appointments. Its non-contact method guarantees mostly painless procedures. The Biolase laser technology is literally taking the fear factor out of dentistry."

The revolutionary Biolase technology was featured on CNBC news. Watch the news clip below ...

As seen on CNBC: WaterLase technology replaces the dreaded needle and dr...

What South African dentists have to say about it

Pretoria East's Dr Nico Verloop, the first dentist in South Africa to use the Biolase Waterlase iPlus believes that there are many important benefits associated with WaterLase dentistry.

"Standard mechanical dentistry is often accompanied by fear and pain by the patient. Although pain may be reduced by local anaesthesia, fear of the needle, noise, and vibration of the tools cause discomfort for many patients. With WaterLase, for the first time many common dental procedures can be performed without local anaesthesia. WaterLase allows the clinician to unobtrusively do dental work while reducing bacteria. WaterLase can also be successfully and safely used on children, the elderly, special needs individuals, chemo patients and pregnant women, unlike some prescribed medication," says Dr Verloop.

Dr Sam Thandar, Johannesburg's first dentist to use the new WaterLase iPlus laser already treats numerous patients. One of his laser filling patients, Laurence van Niekerk, said, "The anxiety before the procedure was worse than the actual procedure! There was no injection, and no pain. There was no drilling or vibration, just a faint popping sound and fine water spray, which felt a bit cold, but really, that's all."

Dr Thandar explains, "The most common comment from patients after having laser dentistry is "Wow, is that it?" Children immediately like the laser as it makes no drilling sound and its painkilling ability is welcomed. Nowadays it is very rare when a WaterLase dentist has to give an injection to a child. Why should children and adults suffer through painful and distressing procedures when there is a quick and painless solution available?

Biolase treatments are virtually painless, cause minimum bleeding and swelling, are less invasive and allow for the preservation of healthier tooth structure during cavity removal. Very importantly, it also helps remove the fear of going to the dentist as there is less need for drills, scalpels and injections. WaterLase is also one of the only effective treatments for deteriorating implants."

How it works

The WaterLase machine sprays a mixture of air, water and laser energy through a special hand piece. The laser energy causes tiny water molecules to heat and explode, cleaning away diseased tissue directly under the laser light. Dr Thandar adds, "In essence the water molecules and laser energy stream cut the tissue or tooth, literally vaporising the decay. A popping sound can be heard when the water molecules pop open. There is no heat, vibration or pressure. The water then cools down the tooth surface, bone or tissue being worked on. The handpiece never comes into contact with the body."

The laser energy is emitted from the hand piece with the tip held just millimetres away from the tooth or tissue. Because there is no bleeding and almost no post-operative pain or swelling when using laser dentistry, it now replaces much surgical work traditionally done with a scalpel.

Peter concludes, "Biolase products increase patient treatment acceptance, allows for early disease detection and intervention, promotes health and reduces anxiety and expenditure. We are seeing our laser education efforts starting to bear fruit as more and more dentists realise the benefits of acquiring the Biolase systems in bringing pain-free, cutting edge dentistry to the patient. It is an exciting time for the evolution of dentistry in South Africa and we're so proud to be part of making this leading technology available locally."

What does it cost?

As there are no specific medical costing laser codes, patients simply pay according to the regular procedure code. The medical aids pay for, or towards certain procedures – whether they're done with traditional tools or the hi-tech laser. Each practice will have its own fee structure for specific procedures, but in most cases it will be similar to the fee that would have been applicable with traditional tools like scalpel blades, drills and sutures. Furthermore, not all lasers are the same, therefore be sure to look for a certified Biolase laser dentist! Only the Biolase WaterLase and the EPIC Lasers can perform certain procedures in a way that other lasers cannot.
